

ANGUILLA TO BECOME A GOLF DESTINATION IN 2006

The Caribbean island of Anguilla will escalate its tradition of upscale tourist trade with the addition of the 18-hole championship Temenos Golf Club, planned to be the ultimate of private and luxurious destinations for the weary. Nearly every hole will have water nearby and course trekkers will always be fairly close to the magnificent Caribbean Sea. The nearly 300-acre property will have close to a mile of oceanfront beaches, 20 estate homes and 16 oceanfront villas.

Beyond the plans for a breathtaking links experience, Flag Luxury Properties and St. Regis Hotels and Resorts will develop a spa and world-class hotel along one of the last 4,000 plus beach properties.

The course will be designed by Greg Norman, who says

"natural formations, dramatic elevation changes and spectacular vistas of St. Maarten and the Caribbean Sea are key elements in our design concept. When combined with the exclusive location of the property, the golf course is sure to be world class." With nearly each hole bordering the isle coast, the course will provide a unique challenge to the experienced and novice dufer alike. Complete clubhouse, pro shop, and Club House Grille amenities will be offered on a five star level.

The Temenos St. Regis Retreat, named in part for the Greek sanctuary, will not be the first getaway on the island. As a matter fact, developers are improving on the smashing success of the smaller three-villa Temenos resort that met with critical acclaim.
